

HEALING FOR THE HOMES SERIES

GOD, WHY ME?

You formed me.

You see me.

You are with me.

— PSALM 139:13-16

Overcomers
Global Network

EDUCATE . EQUIP . EVOLVE

BY PROPHET JOSHUA MATTHEWS

DEDICATION

This booklet is dedicated to the one standing in the middle of a storm they did not ask for — the person who followed God and still lost, who did the right thing and still suffered. Your question is not rebellion. It is the honest cry of a heart that loves God and doesn't understand why it hurts so much.

He hears you, and He is not offended.

A MESSAGE FROM THE FOUNDER

Dear friend,

"Why me?" is one of the most honest prayers a human being can pray. And I believe God honors honesty more than religious performance. I have asked that question myself — in hospital rooms, in financial crises, in seasons of betrayal. And every time, the Lord did not rebuke me for asking. He drew closer.

This booklet will not give you a formula that makes suffering disappear. But it will give you something more powerful: perspective. When you see your pain through the lens of Scripture, everything changes — not because the pain goes away, but because you begin to understand that God is doing something in the fire that He cannot do anywhere else.

Read these pages slowly. Let the Holy Spirit minister to the deepest part of your "why."

With all my love in Christ,

Joshua Matthews

Founder, Overcomers Global Network

The Cry of the Soul

You didn't ask for this. That's what makes it so hard to swallow. You weren't living recklessly. You weren't running from God. You were doing your best — praying, serving, believing — and then the bottom dropped out.

Maybe it was a diagnosis. A phone call in the middle of the night. A spouse who walked out. A child who went astray. A business that collapsed. A death that made no sense. A tragedy that had no warning and no explanation.

And the question rose from the place where theology meets raw emotion: "God, why me? Why this? Why now?"

You've watched people who don't even acknowledge God live comfortable lives. You've seen those who mock the faith prosper while you — the one who tithes, who prays, who fasts — are the one in the fire. And the injustice of it burns in your chest like acid.

You tried not to ask the question. You told yourself, "I should just trust God." But the pain kept pushing, and the question kept rising, and eventually it broke through: "Why, God? Why me?"

I want you to know something: that question is not a sin. David asked it. Job asked it. Jeremiah asked it. Even Jesus asked it from the cross: "My God, My God, why have You forsaken Me?" (Matthew 27:46). If the Son of God asked "why," you have permission to ask it too.

The issue is not the question. The issue is where you go with it. Do you let it drive you away from God — or do you let it drive you deeper into Him?

What the Bible Says

The most detailed exploration of suffering in the Bible is the book of Job. Job was a man who was "blameless and upright, one who feared God and shunned evil" (Job 1:1). He was wealthy, blessed with a large family, respected in his community. And God Himself said of him:

""Have you considered My servant Job, that there is none like him on the earth, a blameless and upright man, one who fears God and shuns evil?""

— Job 1:8 (NKJV)

And then God allowed everything to be taken. His livestock, his servants, his children, his health. In a matter of hours, the most blessed man on earth became the most broken. His wife told him to curse God and die. His friends told him he must have sinned to deserve it. And Job sat in the ashes, scraping his boils, and asked: "Why?"

For 37 chapters, Job wrestled with God. He argued. He complained. He demanded answers. And God did not strike him down for it. But when God finally spoke, He did not answer the "why." Instead, He revealed the "who":

""Where were you when I laid the foundations of the earth? Tell Me, if you have understanding. Who determined its measurements? Surely you know! Or who stretched the line upon it? To what were its foundations fastened? Or who laid its cornerstone, when the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy?""

— Job 38:4-7 (NKJV)

God did not explain the reason for Job's suffering. He revealed His own nature — His power, His wisdom, His sovereignty — and in doing so, He gave Job something better than an answer: trust. Job's response was stunning:

""I have heard of You by the hearing of the ear, but now my eye sees You.""

— Job 42:5 (NKJV)

Before the suffering, Job knew about God. After the suffering, Job knew God. The trial did not destroy his faith — it deepened it to a level that comfort never could have reached.

And God restored Job — not just to where he was before, but to double:

""Now the Lord blessed the latter days of Job more than his beginning; for he had fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, one thousand yoke of oxen, and one thousand female donkeys.""

— Job 42:12 (NKJV)

Your latter will be greater than your former. That is not wishful thinking — it is biblical precedent.

The psalmist Asaph also struggled with the "why me" question. In Psalm 73, he nearly lost his faith watching the wicked prosper while the righteous suffered:

""For I was envious of the boastful, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked... Surely I have cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocence. For all day long I have been plagued, and chastened every morning.""

— Psalm 73:3, 13–14 (NKJV)

But then he went into the sanctuary of God — into worship, into prayer, into the presence of the Lord — and everything changed:

""Until I went into the sanctuary of God; then I understood their end.""

— Psalm 73:17 (NKJV)

When you cannot understand your suffering, go into the sanctuary. The answers you need are not in your head — they are in His presence.

The Root of the Pain

The Crisis of Meaning. The deepest wound of unjust suffering is not the pain itself — it is the feeling that the pain is meaningless. Humans can endure extraordinary hardship if they believe it serves a purpose. But purposeless suffering crushes the soul. The psychiatrist Viktor Frankl, who survived the Holocaust, observed: "Those who have a 'why' to live can bear almost any 'how.'"

When you cannot find the "why" in your suffering, you begin to question everything — your faith, your decisions, God's character. This is a spiritual crisis, and it is one of the most dangerous places a believer can be. Not because God is absent, but because the enemy will use your confusion to pull you away from the very One who can heal you.

Grief and Loss. Much of "why me" pain is rooted in grief — the loss of what was, the loss of what should have been, the loss of the future you imagined. Grief is not linear. It does not follow a clean timeline. Some days you feel fine; other days the wound is as fresh as the moment it was inflicted. This is normal. God created grief as a process, not an event.

The Feeling of Divine Abandonment. Perhaps the most painful root is the belief that God could have prevented your suffering and chose not to. This leads to a crisis of trust: "If God is all-powerful and all-loving, why didn't He stop this?" This is the theological problem of evil, and humanity has wrestled with it for millennia.

But consider this: God did not prevent His own Son from suffering. He sent Jesus to the cross — not because He did not love Him, but because the suffering would produce something that nothing else could: the redemption of the world. Your suffering, too, may be producing something that comfort cannot.

""For our light affliction, which is but for a moment, is working for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.""

— 2 Corinthians 4:17 (NKJV)

Christ's Healing Power

Jesus is not a distant God who observes your suffering from a throne. He is a God who entered suffering. He was born in poverty. He was rejected by His hometown. He was homeless during His ministry ("The Son of Man has nowhere to lay His head" — Matthew 8:20). He was betrayed, beaten, spat upon, mocked, stripped, and crucified.

He knows what it feels like. Every wound you carry, He has carried a version of it in His own flesh. And that is why He can heal you — not just with power, but with understanding:

""For we do not have a High Priest who cannot sympathize with our weaknesses, but was in all points tempted as we are, yet without sin. Let us therefore come boldly to the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need.""

— Hebrews 4:15–16 (NKJV)

He sympathizes. He does not just fix — He feels with you. When you cry, He is not rolling His eyes in heaven. He is weeping with you, just as He wept at the tomb of Lazarus even though He knew He was about to raise him (John 11:35). Jesus weeps with you now — not because He is helpless, but because He loves you.

And He is not only weeping. He is working. Romans 8:28 is still true even when your circumstances seem to deny it. God is working all things together — even the painful things, even the unfair things — for your good and His glory. You may not see it yet. But you will.

""Weeping may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning.""

— Psalms 30:5 (NKJV)

Your morning is coming. The night has been long, but it is not forever.

Healing Prayers

A Prayer for Understanding in the Mystery

Father, I do not understand why this happened to me. I have asked You a thousand times and the silence has been deafening. But today I choose to trust You even without the answer. I believe You are good — not because my circumstances say so, but because Your Word says so. Your ways are higher than my ways, and Your thoughts are higher than my thoughts (Isaiah 55:9). Give me the grace to walk through this mystery with You, not apart from You. I choose trust over understanding. In Jesus' name, amen.

A Prayer for Comfort in Grief

Lord Jesus, You are close to the brokenhearted and You save those who are crushed in spirit (Psalm 34:18). I am brokenhearted, Lord. I am crushed. Hold me right now. Let me feel Your presence in the middle of this grief. I give You permission to enter the places I have closed off in pain. Comfort me with a comfort that no human being can offer. Be my shepherd through this valley. In Your name, amen.

A Prayer Against Bitterness Toward God

Father, I confess that I have been angry with You. I have questioned Your love. I have doubted Your goodness. Forgive me, Lord — not because my pain is not real, but because my perspective has been limited. I cannot see what You see. I do not know what You know. Help me release the bitterness and receive Your peace. I trust that You are writing a story with my life that will end in victory. Even now. Even in this. In Jesus' name, amen.

Prophetic Declarations

"My suffering is not the end of my story. God is still writing."

"What the enemy designed for my destruction, God is converting to my promotion."

"I trust God even when I cannot trace Him."

"My latter days will be greater than my former days."

"This light affliction is producing an eternal weight of glory."

"Joy is coming in the morning. The night will not last forever."

"I am not forsaken. I am not forgotten. I am held."

"God is working all things — even this — together for my good."

"My pain will become my testimony. My scars will become my message."

"The same God who restored Job is restoring me — double."

Reflection & Healing

Reflect on These Questions

1. What is the specific situation that has caused you to ask "Why me?" Write it down honestly.

2. Have you been angry with God? If so, tell Him. He can handle your honesty.

3. Looking back at previous trials in your life, can you see how God used them for good — even though you couldn't see it at the time?

4. Is there a difference between what you feel about God right now and what you know about Him from Scripture? Write both down.

5. What is one thing God has not taken from you, even in this season? Thank Him for it.

6. If you could hear God's voice right now, what do you believe He would say about your situation?

Child of God, you may not have the "why" today. But you have the "who." And the "who" is enough. He is enough. He has always been enough.

A CLOSING PRAYER

Father God, I lift up this reader who has been asking "Why me?" for far too long. Lord, I don't pretend to have all the answers, and I won't offer them empty words. But I know this: You are good, even when life is not. You are faithful, even when circumstances are cruel.

Give them the grace to trust You in the mystery. Give them peace that doesn't require an explanation. Let them know — deep in their spirit — that their suffering is not meaningless, that You are working even now, and that the end of their story will glorify You in ways they cannot yet imagine.

I decree restoration. I decree breakthrough. I decree that this season of pain is producing an eternal weight of glory. In Jesus' name, amen.

AN INVITATION TO CHRIST

If you have never given your life to Jesus Christ, or if suffering has caused you to walk away, come back. He is not the author of your pain — He is the answer to it. Pray: "Lord Jesus, I don't understand everything I've been through. But I believe You are real, You are good, and You died for me. I give You my life and my questions. Be my Lord and Savior. Fill me with Your Spirit. Help me trust You. In Jesus' name, amen."

OVERCOMERS GLOBAL NETWORK

Visit us online: <https://www.overcomersglobalnetwork.com/>

Visit OGN University for free online courses for your journey in Christ:
<https://www.ognuniversity.com/>

Visit us in person and witness and testify of the power of God:
7519 Mentor Ave Suite A106, Mentor, OH 44060

HEALING FOR THE HOMES SERIES

GOD, WHY ME?

When pain has no easy explanation, the soul begins to ask hard questions. This booklet ministers to the person who is suffering and trying to understand why. Through scripture, perspective, and prayer, Joshua Matthews helps the reader bring their questions to God and find strength, hope, and divine nearness in the fire.

Bring your question to God and let Him meet you in the mystery.

Overcomers Global Network

EDUCATE , EQUIP , EVOLVE

Visit us online: overcomersglobalnetwork.com

Free online courses: ognuniversity.com

Visit us in person: 7519 Mentor Ave Suite A106, Mentor, OH 44060