

HEALING FOR THE HOMES SERIES

GOD, MY BETRAYAL IS YOUR CELEBRATION?

You meant it for evil,
but God meant it for good.

DEDICATION

This booklet is dedicated to every soul who has been stabbed in the back by someone they loved, trusted, or walked with. You opened your heart and they used it against you. The wound is real. The confusion is real. But what God is about to show you will turn your understanding of betrayal upside down — because what the enemy meant to destroy you, God has already marked for your celebration.

A MESSAGE FROM THE FOUNDER

Dear friend,

Betrayal is unlike any other wound because it comes from the inside. A stranger cannot betray you — only someone you trusted can. And that is what makes it so devastating. It is not just the act that hurts; it is the realization that the person you believed in was not who you thought they were.

I have experienced betrayal in ministry, in friendships, and in close relationships. I know how it twists your ability to trust anyone — including God. But through every betrayal I've walked through, the Lord has shown me something extraordinary: He uses betrayal as the launching pad for promotion. Not in spite of it — through it.

This booklet is going to challenge the way you see your pain. Let the Holy Spirit open your eyes. What happened to you was not the end — it was the setup for something only God could orchestrate.

With all my love in Christ,

Joshua Matthews

The Cry of the Soul

It's not the enemy outside the gate that hurts the most. It's the one who had the key to the front door.

You trusted them. You confided in them. You let them into places you don't let anyone — your fears, your dreams, the parts of yourself you normally keep guarded. And they took it all and used it against you. Or they simply walked away, as though the relationship that meant everything to you meant nothing to them.

Maybe it was a spouse who built a secret life while looking you in the eye every morning. Maybe it was a business partner who smiled at meetings and schemed behind closed doors. Maybe it was a friend who carried your secrets to people who had no business hearing them. Maybe it was a spiritual leader — someone you honored and submitted to — who used their authority to manipulate, control, or exploit you.

And now you're left holding the pieces, trying to make sense of something that makes no sense at all. The anger comes in waves. One moment you want justice; the next you just want to disappear. Your ability to trust has been shattered — not just toward the person who hurt you, but toward everyone. You find yourself scanning people's words for hidden motives, reading between every line, waiting for the next shoe to drop.

And beneath all of it, there's a question you're almost afraid to ask God: "Lord, did You see this coming? Were You watching? And if You were... why did You let it happen?"

He saw it. He was watching. And what He is about to reveal to you will change the way you understand every betrayal you've ever experienced.

What the Bible Says

The most important betrayal in human history was the betrayal of Jesus Christ by Judas Iscariot. And if you understand what God did with that betrayal, you will understand what He is doing with yours.

Judas walked with Jesus for three years. He ate with Him, traveled with Him, witnessed miracles, heard teachings that changed the world. He was one of the twelve. He was trusted — he even carried the money bag for the entire ministry (John 12:6). And then, for thirty pieces of silver, he sold the Son of God with a kiss.

""Then Judas, His betrayer, seeing that He had been condemned, was remorseful and brought back the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, 'I have sinned by betraying innocent blood.' And they said, 'What is that to us? You see to it!""

— Matthew 27:3–4 (NKJV)

But here is the part the enemy doesn't want you to see: without the betrayal, there is no cross. Without the cross, there is no resurrection. Without the resurrection, there is no salvation.

The very act that was meant to destroy Jesus became the mechanism for the greatest victory in all of creation. Judas thought he was ending a story. God was writing the climax.

""Him, being delivered by the determined purpose and foreknowledge of God, you have taken by lawless hands, have crucified, and put to death; whom God raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that He should be held by it.""

— Acts 2:23–24 (NKJV)

It was the determined purpose of God. God did not merely permit the betrayal — He factored it into His plan from before the foundation of the world. The betrayer thought he was in control. But God was sovereign the entire time.

And this is the pattern that runs through the entire Bible: betrayal leads to promotion.

Joseph was betrayed by his own brothers — sold into slavery, stripped of his identity, and left for dead. Yet the very pit they threw him into was the beginning of the road that led to the palace. As Joseph told them years later:

""But as for you, you meant evil against me; but God meant it for good, in order to bring it about as it is this present day, to save many people alive.""

— Genesis 50:20 (NKJV)

You meant evil. God meant good. The same event. Two different purposes. And God's purpose always wins.

David was betrayed by King Saul, who promised him his daughter in marriage and then tried to kill him with a spear — repeatedly. David spent years running, hiding in caves, sleeping in the wilderness, hunted like an animal by the very king he had faithfully served. But every cave was a classroom. Every wilderness season was preparation. And when Saul fell, David rose — not as a bitter man, but as the greatest king Israel ever had.

Paul was betrayed multiple times. Abandoned by fellow workers, opposed by false brothers, left for dead by people he served. Yet he wrote:

""At my first defense no one stood with me, but all forsook me. May it not be charged against them. But the Lord stood with me and strengthened me, so that the message might be preached fully through me.""

— 2 Timothy 4:16–17 (NKJV)

Everyone left. But the Lord stayed. And that was enough. It will be enough for you too.

The Root of the Pain

Broken Trust. Trust is the foundation of every relationship. When it is shattered, the entire emotional architecture collapses. Research in interpersonal psychology shows that betrayal trauma — especially from close relationships — activates the same brain regions as physical pain. The emotional agony of betrayal is not "in your head" — it is neurologically real. Your brain is literally processing the betrayal as an injury.

This is why betrayal can cause symptoms that mimic post-traumatic stress: hypervigilance, flashbacks, intrusive thoughts, sleep disturbance, difficulty concentrating, and emotional numbness. You are not being dramatic. You are wounded. And wounds need treatment, not dismissal.

The Loss of Identity. Betrayal often attacks your sense of self. You question your judgment: "How did I not see this coming?" You question your worth: "What is wrong with me that they could do this?" You question your ability to discern: "If I was wrong about them, who else am I wrong about?"

This is the secondary wound of betrayal — the self-doubt it creates. The person who betrayed you is responsible for what they did. But the enemy uses their action to make you blame yourself. Do not accept that lie. You were not foolish for trusting. You were human. And your ability to trust was a reflection of God's nature in you — because God Himself extends trust to people who fail Him daily.

The Temptation of Vengeance. Betrayal awakens a primal desire for justice — and sometimes that desire warps into a craving for vengeance. You want them to feel what you felt. You want them to lose what they cost you. You replay fantasies of confrontation, exposure, or payback.

But God says clearly:

""Beloved, do not avenge yourselves, but rather give place to wrath; for it is written, 'Vengeance is Mine, I will repay,' says the Lord.""

— Romans 12:19 (NKJV)

Christ's Healing Power

Here is the revelation that will change everything: God specializes in converting betrayals into celebrations.

The cross was the ultimate betrayal turned celebration. What Judas meant for destruction became the doorway to eternal life for billions. What the religious leaders meant as an execution became the greatest act of love in history. What Satan meant as his ultimate victory became his permanent defeat.

""Having disarmed principalities and powers, He made a public spectacle of them, triumphing over them in it.""

— Colossians 2:15 (NKJV)

In the very act that was designed to destroy Him, Jesus made a public spectacle of the enemy. The instrument of shame became the symbol of victory. The place of death became the source of life.

God is doing the same thing with your betrayal. The thing that was meant to destroy your marriage, your ministry, your confidence, your future — God is converting it into a testimony that will bring hope to thousands. The enemy overplayed his hand. He thought the betrayal would end you. But it is about to be the launching pad for your greatest season.

Joseph went from the pit to Potiphar's house to prison to the palace. The betrayal was the first domino. Without it, he never goes to Egypt. Without Egypt, he never interprets Pharaoh's dream. Without the dream, he never becomes second in command. Without the position, he cannot save his family — or the world — from famine.

Your betrayal is your Joseph moment. The pit is not your permanent address. The palace is being prepared.

""You prepare a table before me in the presence of my enemies; You anoint my head with oil; my cup runs over.""

— Psalm 23:5 (NKJV)

In the presence of your enemies. The very people who betrayed you will watch God celebrate you. That is the kind of God you serve.

Healing Prayers

A Prayer for Healing from Betrayal

Father God, I bring to You the wound of betrayal. You know who did it. You know what it cost me. You know the sleepless nights, the tears, the rage, the confusion. Lord, I cannot carry this anymore. I give it to You — all of it. Heal the broken trust. Heal the shattered identity. Heal the part of me that is afraid to ever open up again. Let Your love be the foundation I rebuild on — not man's faithfulness, but Yours. In Jesus' name, amen.

A Prayer to Release the Betrayer

Lord Jesus, You forgave the ones who nailed You to the cross. Give me that kind of grace. I choose to release the person who betrayed me from the debt they owe me. I do not excuse what they did, but I refuse to let their sin become my prison. I hand them over to You — the righteous Judge. Deal with them according to Your wisdom, not my anger. And set me free from the chains of bitterness. In Your name, amen.

A Prayer for Promotion After Betrayal

Father, I believe that You convert betrayals into celebrations. I believe that what was meant for evil, You are working for good. I ask You to open the doors that this betrayal was meant to close. Promote me in the presence of my enemies. Anoint my head with oil. Let my cup run over. Turn my pain into purpose and my wounds into wisdom. I declare that my greatest season is ahead of me, not behind me. In Jesus' mighty name, amen.

Prophetic Declarations

"My betrayal is not my ending — it is my setup for celebration."

"What they meant for evil, God is converting for my good."

"The pit is not my permanent address. The palace is being prepared."

"I will trust again — wisely, guided by the Holy Spirit."

"God prepares a table for me in the presence of my enemies."

"The cross proves that betrayal cannot stop God's plan."

"I am not defined by who left me. I am defined by Who stayed."

"My betrayer's plan failed. God's plan stands forever."

"I release every Judas in my life to the justice of God."

"My celebration is coming. My promotion is near. It is finished."

Reflection & Healing

Reflect on These Questions

1. Who betrayed you, and what did it cost you emotionally, spiritually, or practically?
2. Have you been blaming yourself for trusting them? What would it mean to release that self-blame?
3. How has the betrayal affected your ability to trust — in relationships, in church, and with God?
4. Can you see any evidence that God is already working something good out of this pain?
5. Are you willing to release the desire for vengeance and trust God's justice?
6. What does "celebration after betrayal" look like for your life? Dream with God about it.

The traitor thought they were writing your obituary. But God is writing your comeback story. And it will be glorious.

A CLOSING PRAYER

Father, I lift up the one holding this booklet — the one whose trust was shattered by someone they loved. Lord, only You understand the depth of that cut. Heal it now, in the name of Jesus. Stitch up the wound with Your love. Replace the venom of bitterness with the oil of joy.

I decree that the betrayal they endured is being converted into divine promotion. I decree that every door that was closed by a traitor is being replaced by doors only God can open. I decree that they will trust again — not foolishly, but wisely, led by Your Spirit.

Thank You, Lord, that the cross itself was born from betrayal — and it produced the greatest victory in history. Do it again in this reader's life. In Jesus' name, amen.

AN INVITATION TO CHRIST

If you have never placed your trust in Jesus Christ — or if betrayal has caused you to walk away — He is extending His hand to you right now. He will never betray you. Pray: "Lord Jesus, people have broken my trust, but I choose to trust You. I believe You died for me and rose again. I surrender my life to You. Be my Lord, my healer, and my faithful friend. Fill me with Your Holy Spirit. In Jesus' name, amen."

HEALING FOR THE HOMES SERIES

GOD, MY BETRAYAL IS YOUR CELEBRATION?

Betrayal cuts deeply because it comes from someone once trusted. This booklet speaks to the wounded heart that feels broken by disloyalty, abandonment, or hidden pain. Through scripture, healing truth, and prayer, Joshua Matthews shows how God can turn betrayal into wisdom, healing, and a testimony of divine restoration.

What wounded you does not have to define you.
