

HEALING FOR THE HOMES SERIES

LORD, MY HEART IS BROKEN

He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds.

– PSALM 147:3

Overcomers
Global Network

EDUCATE . EQUIP . EVOLVE

BY PROPHET JOSHUA MATTHEWS

DEDICATION

This booklet is dedicated to every person walking through life with a broken heart — the kind of brokenness that smiles in public and weeps in private. You have been shattered by loss, by love, by life itself. But the God who heals the brokenhearted is reaching for you through these pages. Let Him touch the pieces. He knows exactly how they fit back together.

A MESSAGE FROM THE FOUNDER

Dear friend,

A broken heart is one of the deepest wounds a person can carry because it touches every part of you — your emotions, your thoughts, your body, your spirit. It changes the way you see the world. It changes the way you see yourself. And if left untreated, it changes the way you see God.

I have watched people in my ministry carry broken hearts for years — even decades — because they were never given permission to grieve, never shown how to heal, and never told that God is not afraid of their tears. He collects them. He honors them. And He uses them as seeds for something beautiful.

This booklet is your permission to feel, to grieve, and to begin to heal. Not on the world's timeline. On God's.

With all my love in Christ,

Joshua Matthews

Founder, Overcomers Global Network

The Cry of the Soul

There is a kind of pain that doesn't bruise the skin. You can't see it in the mirror. You can't point to it on an X-ray. But it is the most real thing in your world right now — a weight in the center of your chest that feels like someone reached inside and squeezed.

Maybe someone you loved died. Not figuratively — literally left this earth, and you were not ready. You had more to say. More to give. More time you assumed would be there. And now there's a chair at the table that will never be filled again, a number in your phone you will never call again, a voice you will never hear again on this side of heaven.

Maybe the break was a relationship — a marriage that crumbled, a friendship that ended in silence, a family member who chose to walk out of your life. The person is still alive, but they are gone from you, and in some ways that is harder because there is no funeral, no closure, no community around you saying, "I'm sorry for your loss."

Maybe it was a dream that died — a calling you believed in, a future you had imagined, a promise you thought God gave you that seems to have evaporated.

Whatever broke your heart, the result is the same: you feel like half a person. The world keeps spinning but you cannot find your footing. People tell you to move on and you want to tell them that you would if your legs still worked. But they don't. Not yet.

""The Lord is near to those who have a broken heart, and saves such as have a contrite spirit.""

— Psalm 34:18 (NKJV)

Near. Not far. Not busy. Not indifferent. Near. The Lord is closer to you in your brokenness than He has ever been.

What the Bible Says

God has a special relationship with the brokenhearted. All throughout Scripture, He positions Himself beside the wounded — not the victorious, not the strong, not the ones who have it all figured out. The broken ones.

""He heals the brokenhearted and binds up their wounds. He counts the number of the stars; He calls them each by name. Great is our Lord, and mighty in power; His understanding is infinite.""

— Psalm 147:3–5 (NKJV)

Notice the juxtaposition. The same God who counts and names the billions of stars in the universe — whose power is beyond measurement — that same God bends down to bandage a broken heart. He is not too big for your pain. He is not too busy for your tears. The One who holds galaxies together is holding you.

Jesus made healing the brokenhearted the centerpiece of His mission statement:

""The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me, because He has anointed Me to preach the gospel to the poor; He has sent Me to heal the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives and recovery of sight to the blind, to set at liberty those who are oppressed.""

— Luke 4:18 (NKJV)

He was sent to heal the brokenhearted. It was not an afterthought. It was the assignment. Your broken heart is not an inconvenience to God — it is the very reason He came.

David — a man intimately acquainted with heartbreak — wrote some of the most comforting words in all of Scripture while his own heart was in pieces:

""You number my wanderings; put my tears into Your bottle; are they not in Your book?""

— Psalm 56:8 (NKJV)

God collects your tears. He does not wipe them away and tell you to move on. He bottles them. He records them. Every tear you have ever cried matters to Him.

The Root of the Pain

Grief. A broken heart is, at its core, an experience of grief — and grief is one of the most complex emotions the human being can endure. It is not a straight line. It does not follow a schedule. It comes in waves — sometimes predictable, often not. You can be fine at breakfast and undone by dinner because a song played, a scent drifted by, or a memory surfaced without warning.

Medical research has documented the physical impact of heartbreak. A condition called "broken heart syndrome" (takotsubo cardiomyopathy) is a real, medically recognized condition where extreme emotional stress causes the heart to temporarily enlarge and pump inefficiently — mimicking a heart attack. Your heartbreak is not just emotional. Your body is processing it too.

Prolonged grief can also manifest as chronic fatigue, weakened immunity, insomnia, digestive issues, brain fog, and a persistent sense of heaviness that no amount of rest seems to relieve. This is your body saying, "I am carrying something I was not designed to carry alone."

Unprocessed Emotion. Many believers bury their pain because they believe it is unspiritual to grieve. They quote scriptures about joy and faith while swallowing tears they were never meant to swallow. But Jesus wept (John 11:35) — openly, publicly, without apology. If the Son of God is not ashamed to cry, neither should you be.

Suppressed grief does not disappear. It goes underground and resurfaces as anger, numbness, anxiety, or depression. The emotions must be processed — not in your own strength, but in the presence of the Healer.

The Wound of Rejection. Some heartbreak is caused by rejection — being told, through words or actions, that you are not enough. Rejection strikes at the very core of identity. It says, "You are not wanted. You are not valuable. You are disposable." And if left unhealed, it distorts the way you see yourself, God, and everyone around you.

""The stone which the builders rejected has become the chief cornerstone.""

— Psalm 118:22 (NKJV)

What people reject, God promotes. Their verdict is not final. His is.

Christ's Healing Power

Jesus is described in Isaiah as "a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief" (Isaiah 53:3). He is not a God who stands above your heartbreak and offers instructions. He is a God who entered heartbreak — who wore it, carried it, and was crushed by it on purpose — so that He could meet you in yours.

""Surely He has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; yet we esteemed Him stricken, smitten by God, and afflicted. But He was wounded for our transgressions, He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement for our peace was upon Him, and by His stripes we are healed.""

— Isaiah 53:4–5 (NKJV)

He bore your grief. That word in Hebrew is nasa — it means to lift up, to carry away, to bear the burden. He did not just sympathize with your grief from a distance. He picked it up and carried it Himself.

Right now, the Spirit of the Lord is hovering over the broken places in your heart — the same Spirit that hovered over the formless void in Genesis 1 before God spoke and creation came forth. Your heart may feel like a void right now. But God is about to speak. And when He speaks, things that were dead come alive. Things that were empty get filled. Things that were shattered get rebuilt.

""He has sent Me to heal the brokenhearted... to comfort all who mourn, to console those who mourn in Zion, to give them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.""

— Isaiah 61:1, 2–3 (NKJV)

Beauty for ashes. Joy for mourning. Praise for heaviness. These are not wishes — they are divine exchanges. God takes what the fire destroyed and gives you something more beautiful in return. He takes the mourning that has consumed your mornings and replaces it with joy you did not think was possible. He lifts the heaviness off your shoulders and drapes you in a garment of praise that the enemy cannot remove.

That exchange is available to you today. Right now. You do not have to earn it. You simply have to receive it.

Healing Prayers

A Prayer for a Broken Heart

Father God, my heart is broken and I have no words to explain the depth of this pain. But You see it. You feel it. You know every crack and every fracture. Lord, I bring You the pieces — all of them. Even the ones I thought were too small to matter. Put me back together. Not the way I was before, but the way You always intended me to be. Bind up my wounds with Your love. Heal me from the inside out. Let me feel Your presence wrapping around me right now like a warm blanket in a cold room. In Jesus' name, amen.

A Prayer for Those Grieving a Loss

Lord, they are gone and I am still here, and I don't know how to do this without them. The silence is deafening. The memories are both a comfort and a knife. I know they are with You — and that gives me hope. But Lord, I miss them in a way that words cannot capture. Comfort me with Your presence. Let me grieve without guilt. Let me cry without apology. And when the wave of pain comes, hold me until it passes. You are the God of all comfort (2 Corinthians 1:3). Comfort me now. In Jesus' name, amen.

A Prayer for Emotional Restoration

Holy Spirit, restore my ability to feel. I have been numb for so long that I've forgotten what joy feels like. Thaw the frozen places in my heart. Melt the walls I built to protect myself from further pain. Give me the courage to love again, to hope again, to open my heart again — not recklessly, but wisely, under Your guidance. I receive the oil of joy for mourning. I receive beauty for ashes. I receive life where death has been. In Jesus' name, amen.

Prophetic Declarations

"My heart is being healed by the hand of God."

"I am not destroyed. I am being rebuilt — stronger and more beautiful."

"God collects my tears and turns them into seeds of joy."

"What was taken from me is being restored in ways I cannot yet imagine."

"I will love again. I will laugh again. I will live again."

"The spirit of heaviness is lifting. The garment of praise is coming."

"My grief is not permanent. My morning of joy is arriving."

"I am not alone in this. The Lord is near to my broken heart."

"Beauty is rising from the ashes of my pain."

"God is making all things new — including me."

Reflection & Healing

Reflect on These Questions

1. What broke your heart? Allow yourself to name it fully — don't minimize it.

2. Have you given yourself permission to grieve, or have you been suppressing the pain?

3. How has heartbreak changed the way you see yourself? The way you see God?

4. Is there a memory connected to this pain that keeps replaying? Invite Jesus into that memory and ask Him to show you where He was.

5. What does healing look like for you? Not the absence of pain — but the ability to carry it with hope?

6. Write a letter to God about your broken heart. Tell Him everything. He is listening.

Beloved, broken things in the hands of God become holy things. He is not throwing away the pieces. He is making a mosaic. And it will be the most beautiful thing you have ever seen.

A CLOSING PRAYER

Father God, I bring before You a heart that has been shattered. You see every piece. You know where every crack began. Lord, You are the master healer — the One who binds up wounds that no surgeon can reach.

I ask You, in the mighty name of Jesus Christ, to touch this reader's heart right now. Put the pieces back together. Not the way they were before — better. Stronger. More beautiful. Let them feel Your hands on their heart. Let them know they are not alone in this.

I decree healing. I decree restoration. I decree that the joy of the Lord is becoming their strength again. The weeping is turning to dancing. In Jesus' name, amen.

AN INVITATION TO CHRIST

If you have never given your broken heart to Jesus, this is the moment. He is the only One who can truly mend it. Pray: "Lord Jesus, my heart is in pieces and I need You. I believe You died for me and rose again. I give You everything — my pain, my grief, my life. Be my Savior and my healer. Fill me with Your Spirit and begin to put me back together. In Jesus' name, amen."

OVERCOMERS GLOBAL NETWORK

Visit us online: <https://www.overcomersglobalnetwork.com/>

Visit OGN University for free online courses for your journey in Christ:
<https://www.ognuniversity.com/>

Visit us in person and witness and testify of the power of God:
7519 Mentor Ave Suite A106, Mentor, OH 44060

HEALING FOR THE HOMES SERIES

LORD, MY HEART IS BROKEN

A broken heart can touch every part of life, leaving a person wounded, weary, and struggling to hope again. This booklet speaks to the grief, loss, and inner pain that many carry in silence. Through scripture, honest comfort, and healing prayer, Joshua Matthews points the reader to the God who still heals the brokenhearted.

Let the Lord touch the places where you are still hurting.

Overcomers
Global Network

EDUCATE , EQUIP , EVOLVE

Visit us online: overcomersglobalnetwork.com

Free online courses: ognuniversity.com

Visit us in person: 7519 Mentor Ave Suite A106, Mentor, OH 44060